EVR PRODUCTIONS / TWO EXPERIENCES. EIGHT DEDICATED PAGES. / V6

Two references.
One original EVR experience.

This package reflects analysis of The Big Day by Chai and Geela Creative Space, followed by a local review of the supplied screen recording. V6 develops every menu destination into a full dedicated page, while retaining the two animated landing experiences and the quotation workflows. Wedding pages use warm editorial storytelling; corporate pages use bold type, cool colours and production-focused content.

01 / Client concept PDF ↗

Standalone mobile screenshot, also included in the deck.

06 / Editable browser presentation ↗

HTML/CSS presentation source. Keep the assets folder beside it. The PDF works independently.

10 / Full V4 homepage walkthrough ↗

Actual local browser capture of card swapping, hero chapters, date layout, media cards, phone/process changes, team carousel, testimonial playback and FAQ.

11 / Process section: scroll-only proof ↗

Wheel input moves through steps 1–5 and back again. No step buttons are clicked: the pin, phone tilt, crossfade, notification and progress all follow scroll position.

12 / Brands & Corporate motion preview ↗

Actual browser recording: showreel demo, scroll-driven service cards in both directions, approach grid, portrait reels, portfolio and closing sections.

13 / Explore the corporate page ↗

Brand films, marketing reels, YouTube and podcasts. Scroll through the services, use the service buttons, or skip the sequence.

View the full corporate layout in static, reduced-motion mode. The five-slide narrated walkthrough covers the original core concept; use the dedicated corporate recording to show V5 interactions.

One-click experience switch: use the persistent Home / Brands & Corporate control in the website header. It stays visible outside the menu on phones and tablets and follows browser back/forward navigation. Home has a warm rounded menu; Corporate has a blue, softly squared menu. Each menu link now opens its own full page, rather than jumping within the landing page. The active page is underlined. Shared enquiries retain their originating experience. The switch links work with keyboard Enter.

14 / Eight-page scroll walkthrough ↗

Actual browser recording of the dedicated page introductions, reversible chapter scenes and closing sections.

15 / Start with production services ↗

Explore four production formats, then use the separate corporate menu to open approach, work and quoting.

Detailed quotation planners and floating access

Client content checklist / Download the printable checklist: recommended photo and video quantities, project information, business details, permissions, quote-request choices and launch access.

The supplied DR Photography quotation was initially represented by the simplified estimator and staff PDF demo. The site now also has an original EVR detailed planner on each quotation page. This is a functional adaptation, not an embedded copy of the DR-branded file.

- Home / Weddings: the warm bottom-right Wedding quote button opens the detailed wedding planner. Select events, individual shoot days, dates, sessions, crew and equipment quantities, pre-wedding packages, edits, albums and a storage drive. Raw footage and custom specifications are requests to price separately, not promised complimentary inclusions.
- Brands & Corporate: the blue Brand quote button opens the separate production planner. Select brand films, reels, YouTube, podcast or corporate-event shoots; set crew and equipment by day, finished edits, formats and intended usage.
- Placement: bottom-right on browsing pages, with a compact touch-friendly button on phones. Hidden on either quotation page, enquiry and studio so it does not cover form controls. Both quote-page introductions also offer a direct detailed-planner button.
- Preview: enter a sample client name, select quantities, then choose Preview / print quote request. The branded document includes requested items, quantities, day-level scope and notes, with no rate, amount or total columns. Use Print / Save as PDF in the browser. Discuss this scope transfers requirements to the local enquiry without overwriting an existing brief.

- Call-only pricing: both quick and detailed customer planners now show Pricing will be discussed on a call. There are no customer-facing prices, automatic totals or detailed rate controls. The original staff studio is a separate internal-workflow demonstration, not the customer quote form.

Current requirement: customers select scope only; EVR discusses all pricing personally on a call. This supersedes earlier public-estimator proposals and priced examples in the historical planning material below. Detailed forms retain independent in-tab state until reload, without transmitting or saving customer details. Staff authentication, persistent records, online sending and bookings remain future scope.

The complete navigation

Home / Weddings	Brands & Corporate
Weddings: editorial hero, three scroll chapters, planning principles, film demo and FAQ.	Services: four scroll-driven service chapters, scope guidance and FAQ.
Selected work: featured wedding story, independent story filters and example briefs.	Brand work: featured case-study layout, format filters, example briefs and motion demo.
Our process: five-stage scroll journey, responsibilities, review and handover guidance.	Our approach: a four-stage production journey, principles and practical hand-off checklist.
Wedding quote request: quick requirements, event/day planner and price-free preview.	Production quote request: quick requirements, brand shoot planner and price-free preview.

The two quote pages share one quick requirements form, mounted into the current route without duplicate field IDs. The detailed wedding and corporate planners keep separate selections. Neither customer form calculates or displays pricing. Requests carry scope only to a local enquiry, and a custom brief is preserved rather than overwritten.

Motion: pinned artwork chapters on Weddings, Our process, Services and Our approach; gentle media drift, scroll-progress underlines and reveal effects elsewhere. Forms do not move while being edited. Each chapter scene offers direct buttons and a skip control. Short viewports and reduced-motion preferences show all chapter content without a pinned runway. No wheel interception or endless animation loop is used.

Scope update: the full concept now contains 12 route views: two landing experiences, eight menu pages, the shared enquiry and the staff quotation studio. The earlier eight-page budget allowance below is historical planning context, not a fixed price for this expanded V6 scope. Reconfirm content, animation, backend requirements and commercial terms before issuing a production quotation.

Presenting the Brands & Corporate page

Start with the opening film placeholder, then scroll into the four-service showcase. The navigation stays put while the original artwork passes through the centre and the service description changes. Scroll backwards to demonstrate that the motion follows the page position, rather than a timed slideshow. The approach grid and portrait reels add lighter motion without additional long pinned sections.

Mobile uses a shorter service sequence. Reduced-motion preferences and short viewports show all four services in a readable, non-pinned layout. Video samples play only after clicking, one at a time. Enquiries preselect the relevant service, and the corporate estimate action selects the existing corporate rate example.

All new service artwork is original. Media is labelled as demonstration content, and the client-story section explicitly awaits real feedback. GCS's logos, photography, testimonials, statistics, technology services and business claims have not been copied into EVR. The scope remains production, not an assumed social-management or paid-advertising offering.

What to send first

1. Send EVR-Concept-Presentation.pdf and EVR-Walkthrough.mp4 through your own WhatsApp chat. Use EVR-Scroll-Motion-Preview.mp4 to show the real on-scroll effects.
2. Send EVR-Sample-Quotation.pdf to demonstrate the quotation output. Use EVR-Reference-Analysis-and-Plan.pdf for the detailed discussion.
3. During a call, open index.html locally. The prototype has no public URL and has not been deployed.

4. For an editable hand-off, share the complete folder or ZIP. Do not send only the HTML without its CSS, script and artwork.

Recommended scope, not a binding quotation

Earlier staff-only baseline: approximately INR 65,000. Provisional 5–7 weeks after content, pricing rules and approvals. Up to 8 agreed pages/templates, 12 initial portfolio projects, one admin role, two agreed staff quotation workflows, rate management, saved quotations, one PDF layout, basic enquiry management, WhatsApp contact, two consolidated design rounds and 30 days of bug-fix support. Public estimates are not included in this baseline.

Combined reference-led scope: provisional INR 80,000–95,000 and 6–9 weeks. Adds a scoped public estimator, shared pricing rules and saved estimates to the staff-tool baseline. Final price depends on event/session rules, custom pricing, tax treatment and workflow complexity. This is a planning allowance, not a fixed offer or researched market quote.

Excluded from both: domain, hosting, ongoing maintenance, applicable taxes, third-party charges, payment integration, automated messaging, CRM integration, client mobile app and the references' operational systems. No lead or revenue guarantees.

Confirm before starting development

- Visual direction and approved EVR branding.
- Actual wedding/corporate services and portfolio media.
- Staff-only final quotations versus public instant estimates.
- Rates: per day, per session, per person, per output and package rules.
- Discount permissions, travel, tax treatment, quote validity, advance and payment milestones.
- Delivery timelines, revision limits, cancellation terms and final PDF content.
- Fixed scope, acceptance criteria, commercial terms and responsibilities.

Assets to request

Logo files; company introduction; strongest wedding and corporate media; publication permissions; service list; package/rate sheet; existing quotation sample; approved testimonials/client logos; contact details; service locations; social links; domain/hosting status; and booking/delivery policies. Use invitations or role-based access for technical accounts, not passwords in chat.

What is functional in this prototype?

- Eight responsive views, plus a collapsible mobile navigation.
- Selectable hero cards and reversible gallery, perspective and floating-note chapters.
- Date validation and transfer of the chosen date/service into the enquiry form, without checking availability or reserving anything.
- Playable local illustrated motion samples in project and testimonial layouts; one preview at a time, with close, native playback controls and pause on leaving the viewport.
- Five-stage phone/process illustration driven by scroll or step buttons, with a static selectable fallback.
- Three-page team-role carousel, expandable testimonial-placement notes and homepage FAQ.
- Portfolio category filters and project-detail previews on labelled placeholder cards.
- Customer-facing estimate with sample coverage/output calculations and transfer into a demo brief.
- Required-field validation and a demo enquiry confirmation. No request is sent or stored.
- Two staff quotation presets with editable quantities/rates, discount and tax.
- Validation of invalid numeric inputs and over-large discounts.
- One local browser draft, with save/load feedback. Storage may be browser-dependent for local files.
- Quotation preview and browser Print / Save as PDF.

Not implemented or claimed: authentication, server storage, real enquiries, EVR client footage, genuine testimonials, cloud sync, a client portal/mobile app, automatic WhatsApp/email delivery, payments, live availability, booking or a live CMS. The public estimate is simplified, not a complete event/crew rules engine. Demo amounts are not EVR's approved prices.

Motion design: expanded from the supplied recording

The V4 homepage uses a pinned, multi-stage scroll story. The opening copy exits, the media collects into a stack, six cards spread around a central EVR statement, two original perspective panels appear, creative-brief notes float into place, then wedding/corporate choices arrive. Scrolling backwards reverses each phase. Native scrolling remains intact; Skip intro exits to the main services. Mobile has a shorter timeline and its own gallery arrangement. Reduced-motion and no-JavaScript modes use a static hero without the scroll runway.

The separate process section pins the phone and text. Native scroll continuously changes the phone's three-dimensional tilt, screen crossfades, progress and notification position while highlighting the relevant step. Step buttons additionally seek the same sequence. Reduced motion and short phone screens keep the buttons usable without a pinned runway. Watch the scroll-only process demonstration, view the hero storyboard or watch the complete homepage walkthrough. PDFs show static layouts, not animations.

Interactive hero cards

Click or tap either visible side card to bring it to the front. The previous front card moves into that side position; the third card stays in place. The swap also works with keyboard Enter/Space and in reduced-motion mode. Card selection is disabled once the scroll-story gallery takes over, and your selection is restored when you scroll back. No automatic cycling or hero playback is enabled.

The hero still uses image placeholders, as requested. Its containers support image/video sizing; hero video sources, poster frames, playback, sound and controls will be configured when actual footage is supplied. Lower-page project and testimonial previews already play two locally generated, clearly labelled illustration demos. They are not real EVR work or reviews.

What the recording adds to the scope

The expanded animation, phone mockup, team-role carousel and testimonial layouts are design demonstrations, not approval to build the reference company's operational systems. Reconfirm the animation, media optimisation and content scope before issuing a fixed production quotation. The earlier budget ranges remain provisional; a functioning client portal, notifications, mobile app or availability engine requires a separate estimate.

Walkthrough narration

> The narrated slideshow uses an installed Windows synthetic English voice, not your voice, and explains the core concept and quotation workflow. The newer full-homepage and hero-motion previews are silent actual browser recordings; use those to demonstrate V4 interactions. Use the script below if you prefer to record a personal voiceover.

Open the revised five-part narration script. The same text drives the local synthetic voiceover, so the video and editable script stay aligned.

Artwork, references and privacy

The wedding scene, studio scene, rings and geometric art were created locally for this concept. These are illustrations, not EVR project photography. The public references informed high-level composition and workflow, not copied images, code, testimonials, client identities or promises. The supplied quotation reference informed the functional analysis only; its logo, embedded imagery and terms were not copied. All deliverables were produced locally. Nothing has been published, messaged to the client or uploaded.
